

My darling Katie

To meet one's primary soulmate in this life time as first love is very special and an incredibly enriching and rewarding experience. The intensity and the depth of the love you share with each other is hard to describe or even imagine. I believe this kind of unconditional love is only possible once you have shared many previous romantic lifetimes together

On a magical evening 7 April 1969 I met my darling Katie. She had just finished high school and we got to spend the next 15,850 days (or 43 years 4 months and 21 days) together enjoying absolute bliss and very fortunate to have many blessings bestowed on us.

Our Life changed on 10 June 2012 when my darling Katie was diagnosed with cancer and our 80 day journey began. Whilst the doctors told us the cancer was incurable, they advised us it was treatable and they believed, because of her excellent health, she would become a long term cancer survivor. Unfortunately this was not to be and she died in my arms on 28 August 2012 at The Sydney Adventist Hospital Wahroonga.

I now continue on my life journey without her embracing the family we created together, the family we were born into and all the family we gathered along the way.

I take comfort in the knowledge it is only a short time before I will be with her again to continue on our journey into eternity.

As Vincent Van Gogh once said: "Love is eternal. The aspect may change but not the essence"
